

Tips, advice and some fun facts about our little friends who mean so much to us!

October: A Month of Beauty and Celebration!

The leaves are beginning to change colour while the days are getting shorter and shorter—it's that time of year again! Autumn is here and with the chillier weather she brings delightful scenery, which is a wonderful time for walking our best little friends outdoors. But she also leaves with a host of ghouls and frightening goblins, so we've got to prepare our dogs for the sight of people in scary costumes and masks, as well as the noise of fireworks.

So this month I've included some good tips to help you and your dog through this frightening time of year. Of course, when combined with a little consideration for our dogs' needs, it's also a fun time of year, so I do hope that you and your dogs have a lovely time this month.

As usual enjoy the rest of this newsletter. I truly hope it brings you helpful and enjoyable reading for the changing season.

How to Stop the Demons Getting to Your Pet!

Even if we're having lots of fun on Halloween and Guy Fawkes Night, it can be absolutely terrifying for our pets. Some pets dread the noise so much that they'll do anything to escape and can even injure themselves while trying to find safety. That's no reason to forego the festivities, though, because there are things you can do to help your pets relax and enjoy the evenings along with you.

- Desensitization: This is more of a long-term process that helps pets adjust to loud noises, but it's never too late to start! You can play a recording of fireworks, thunder or gunshots in your home, beginning at a low volume, to introduce the noise to your pet. Slowly increase the volume over time so that they can adjust. Reward them when they remain calm with the noise and they'll associate it with good things.

- Limit Affection: This is the hardest thing to do when our dogs are frightened, because we want to comfort them and let them know that everything is OK. But when we pet them and say, "It's alright," while they're in a state of panic, it reinforces the behavior. Instead, use commands such as "sit" and reward them for following your direction. They'll soon understand that listening to you means nothing bad will happen to them, which helps them stay calm.

A Wonderful World of Animals!

! A Tibetan mastiff has reportedly become the most expensive dog ever sold. According to ananova.com, the dog named Yangtze River Number Two, was sold to a woman in the Chinese province of Shaanxi for around £350,000. This price beats the previous record by a staggering £260,000.

! A Border Collie puppy named Pixie is learning sign language after it was discovered that she is profoundly deaf. Liz Grewal, who has been an owner of deaf dogs for six years, is teaching the youngster to recognize hand commands. So far the bright young pup has learned to sit, lie down and come on command with hand signals.

! A cat weighing two-and-a-half stone is believed to be the heaviest cat in the world. According to Ananova.com, Chubby, who comes from Qingdao, in northern China's Shandong province, has a 27inch waste – which is bigger than some humans. The obese feline is gaining weight at a rate of 2lbs per year which is likely to be due to her love of raw pork instead of fish.

Groomed really well and left so nice, gasps from your friends they're sure to entice!

Why Groomingdales is the Right Choice for You!

What I can do for you!

I'm sure many of you suffer with "bad doggie odour" given the wonderful weather we experience in the UK; the dogs are continually getting wet. I can offer you a quick and convenient solution to eradicate dog odours, giving you more pleasure in cuddling Rover now he smells so fresh!

The hydro-bath is made from high strength fiberglass meaning it is suitable for all sizes from Maltese Terriers to Great Danes. With an in built heating system it has its very own supply of warm water so you have no worries about your dog keeping warm. The spray head produces a unique hydro-combing action that massages and stimulates the skin, so not only is it the most effective way of washing your dog but also provides a therapeutic water massage. This helps with blood circulation, relieves tired muscles and has been found to be beneficial for arthritis sufferers and older dogs. Water penetrates the coat getting right to the skin removing dry dead skin cells, embedded flea eggs and other materials that can be hidden and hard to get rid of, especially for dogs with longer and thicker coats. Your dog and your home will remain doggy smell free for longer so you're friends and neighbours can visit and you'll not be embarrassed about the odour.

Another excellent advantage is that certain treatment solutions for skin conditions or flea prevention can be added to the water during the hydro-bath. This ensures that maximum benefit is obtained from any treatment as the water spray not only gets deeply into the fur but also reaches the skin which is most important for any type of treatment.

Depending on the size of the dog and the condition of the coat, a bath, brush and dry will take approximately an hour to complete, while you sit back with a cuppa and read the paper, knowing your dog is in the best hands just meters from your front door.

- Remain Calm: Dogs often mimic what they sense in us, their owners, so when we're anxious or fearful of loud noises, you can bet they will be too. By ignoring loud bangs (when possible) and staying relaxed, we help our dogs do the same.

Most importantly, we must not punish pets for their fears, as this only makes it more stressful for them.

These things help our pets get used to the noise, but taking some extra precautions will ensure they stay safe. To lessen the impact of fireworks, you can draw your curtains and let them stay in an area that helps them feel safe—even if it's under the couch! But if they'll be out in the garden or if there's any chance of them escaping your home, be sure to lock your gates and have proper identification attached to their collars. This is the worst time of year for pets running away, so it's important that we do all we can to keep them home safely.

If you'll be seeing lots of masks and costumes around your home this year, try wearing one around your pet beforehand so that they can get used to the sight of it. To do this, let them sniff the mask before you put it on and let them watch you do this. Stay calm and cheerful while letting them sniff at your hands; reward them with a little treat if they stay relaxed at the sight of you in a mask. And if you have little ones, remind them not to jump out at the pets while in their costumes. But because some dogs can become aggressive when frightened, it's best to keep them on a lead and under your calm command if you'll be around costumed strangers.

Grooming Nervous or Frightened Pets!

While grooming is a pleasant experience for most pets, a few can become very nervous. They may not like getting bathed, having their hair blown dry, their nails trimmed or even just the strange settings and various grooming tools.

This can happen for many reasons; unfortunately, some pets may have had a bad experience with less than reputable groomers or weren't introduced correctly to grooming during their first visit. Others just have anxiety over things they're not overly familiar with.

When pets become nervous during grooming, it can make the process a bit difficult, as they can be fidgety or even become aggressive from their fear. When this happens, extra special care and consideration is required. It's so important that grooming is as pleasant and stress-free as possible, and thankfully, there are methods to use at home that help pets overcome any fears they may have.

The following list of strategies is the at-home version of methods we use during grooming, which can help make the whole process feel like second nature for your best little buddy.

* Whenever you run a bath or use the sink, you can cup a little bit of water in your hand and let your dog sniff and lick at it. Eventually, you can run the little bit of water over their heads and down their backs, while praising their calmness, so that they find it a relaxed and enjoyable experience.

* To help them with the noise of dryers and clippers, you can turn on a hair dryer or hair clippers while they're in the room with you and calmly talk to them. Once they approach you, praise them. If they remain calm, continue praising them as you blow a light whoosh of air over them with the dryer or hold the handle of the vibrating clippers near to them. What's important here is that they don't perceive it as being a "big deal".

* Handle their paws as often as possible, as this encourages them to be less protective of their feet.

When dogs have a great deal of anxiety at home or with grooming, one of the best things we can do for them is give them lots of exercise. If you're concerned about your dogs' nervousness or behaviors during grooming, try taking them for a walk before their appointment—this gives them a chance to relieve themselves and to get rid of some excess energy. 30-45 minutes of walking is ideal, but of course, there's not always time for that, so any little bit can help.

If you have any questions or concerns about your dog's comfort level with grooming, please let me know, and we can figure out the best course of action to make it the most pleasant experience for all of us.

Doggy Humour!

A traveler was checking into his hotel when he noticed a dog sleeping on a chair close by. He asked the rather grumpy receptionist, "Sir, does your dog bite?" to which the receptionist replied, "No". The traveler reached out his hand to pet the dog and it immediately leapt from the seat and sunk its teeth into the man's hand. "I thought you said your dog doesn't bite!" exclaimed the traveler. To which he got the reply "Sir, that is not my dog".

Don't Drop that Fruit!

Last month we talked about the toxic effect that chocolate has on dogs, but unfortunately, it doesn't end there. There are actually fruits that can make dogs very ill, too. All unripe fruit can make dogs sick and should be avoided, yet there are ripened fruits that they shouldn't eat either.

Two of the biggest culprits are grapes and raisins. You may have already fed some of these to your dogs without seeing any harmful effects, but they can and do poison dogs. Grapes and raisins contain a canine toxin that has not yet been identified—what has been identified is kidney failure resulting from these two foods. So even though they may love them, it's best not to let them have any whatsoever.

Two other harmful fruits are avocados and black cherries. Again, it's best not to let dogs eat any of these, as it's too dangerous. But if your dogs are fond of apples, it is okay to give them the occasional slice so long as it doesn't have any seeds or stem attached—seeds contain a tiny bit of cyanide which can cause illness. And if that weren't enough, the pits of peaches and plums are harmful, too!

Dogs love to share our favorite treats, but with chocolate and these fruits, it's just not worth the risk.

Keeping Your Dog's Ears Clean!

Something that can easily go unnoticed in dogs is the cleanliness of their ears, because unlike us, most of them have flaps hanging down over the openings. But their inner ears can develop a build-up of dirt and waxy residue that can lead to problems, such as ear infections. To complicate matters, some breeds grow an enormous amount of hair from their inner ears that can trap this dirt and wax.

To prevent infection from dirt and debris, it's important to keep their ears clean and to pluck out excess hair. Some dogs, such as poodles, require hair plucking more often than others, but it's usually best to do it monthly.

Hair plucking requires a gentle process with specialized tools, so it's best to leave this job for the groomer. To help keep their ears clean between appointments, you can use cotton balls and canine ear solution to wipe dirt and wax away from their inner ear flaps. But be sure to avoid their deep inner ear and to use large cotton balls rather than the little swabs. However, monthly grooming is usually adequate for clean ears.

If you notice any strange odors from their ears or if they're scratching at them and whining, it's best to contact your veterinarian, as this could be from mites or an inner ear infection.

Did You Know!

! A single pair of cats and their kittens can produce as many as 420,000 kittens in just 7 years.

! When out walking your dog it's better to choose different routes as much as possible. Walking is great for your dog's physical health, but taking them to new places where they can find new scents and smells can really help keep them in good mental shape as well.

Most dogs need plenty of mental stimulation to keep boredom at bay. So letting them experience new things and new places will really help perk them up, get them excited and keep them from getting bored.

! The domestic cat is the only cat species able to hold its tail vertically while walking. All wild cats hold their tails horizontally or tucked between their legs while walking.
